Fish Game

An original narrative game I've been art-directing since 2025 — a post-human earth where the oceans inherit intelligence. I own the visual development end to end.

Earth is abandoned. Without a master species, the oceans inherit intelligence — and have to decide what to do with it.

FAN ART

My Singing Monsters

Three of these were officially reposted by the developers and picked up across the community Discord — the response is what convinced me to start posting my work publicly.

Fully rendered fan art of My Singing Monsters, developed by Big Blue Bubble. These are the pieces where I push furthest on form, light and colour.

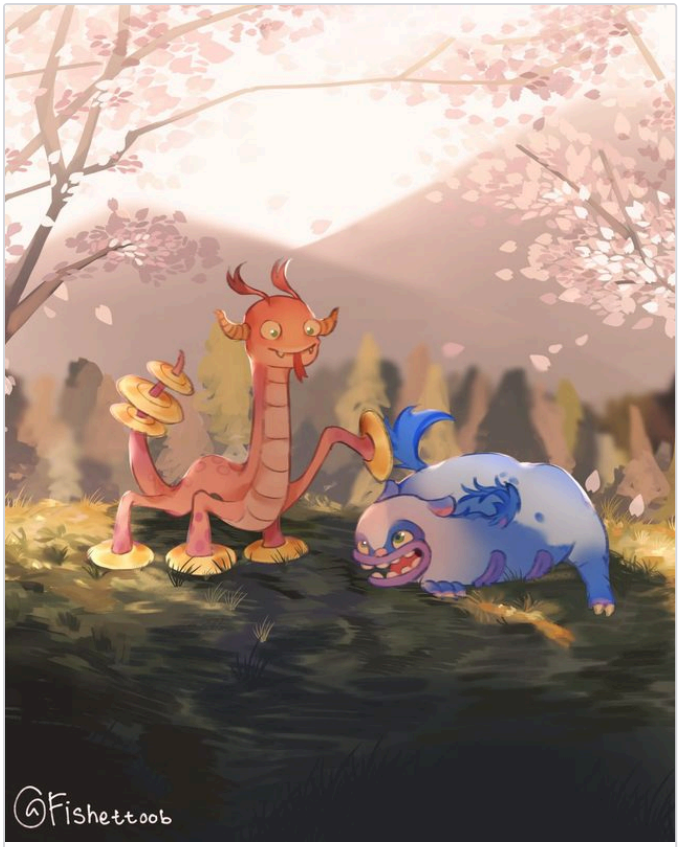

My Singing Monsters and its characters are the property of Big Blue Bubble.
These are unofficial fan works, shown as rendering and composition samples.

PERSONAL WORK

Illustration & Character Concepts

Where the horror-leaning palette and heavy-contrast rendering that shape my game work get developed.

Most of this section follows Sotto — my original character, named after soto*, the Indonesian soup, and built out of a long-running fixation on ghosts.*

Two pieces here are fan art and are credited as such: Reliquary for the band Ghost, and Rabbit Room for a character by the artist skineor.

CLIENT WORK

Commissioned & Product

Paid work drawn to someone else's brief and to real production constraints — cut-lines, bleed, branded colourways and a fixed delivery date.

Illustrator & Concept Artist

@sottonos

I've been drawing seriously since secondary school and have spent the last few years moving from standalone illustration into production art — work that has to function inside a system, not just look good in isolation.

That shift is what most of this portfolio documents. A character sheet has to survive being redrawn forty times. A dialogue sprite has to key cleanly off a base pose so the set stays consistent and cheap to extend. A HUD portrait has to still read once it's cropped into a corner of the screen at a fraction of its size. A keychain design has to hold up as a physical cut acrylic object with a hole punched through it.

I'm reading for a BSc in Innovation and Technology at the University of Hong Kong. It's a project-heavy degree, and my 2D work is what I bring to it — on group coursework I'm usually the one carrying the visual side, from interface mockups to presentation material. It also means I'm comfortable on both sides of the handoff: I can talk to engineers about asset pipelines and export constraints without needing a translator.
